STUDENT'S PRAYER

TO BE EVER CONCIOUS OF MY UNITY WITH GOD, TO LISTEN FOR HIS VOICE AND HEAR NO OTHER CALL.

TO SEPARATE ALL ERROR FROM MY THOUGHT OF MAN, AND SEE HIM ONLY AS MY FATHER'S IMAGE, TO SHOW HIM REVERENCE AND SHARE WITH HIM MY HOLIEST TREASURES.

TO KEEP MY MENTAL HOME A SACRED PLACE GOLDEN WITH GRATITUDE, REDOLENT WITH LOVE, WHITE WITH PURITY, CLEANSED FROM THE FLESH.

TO SEND NO THOUGHT INTO THE WORLD THAT WILL NOT BLESS, OR CHEER, OR PURIFY, OR HEAL.

TO HAVE NO AIM BUT TO MAKE EARTH A FAIRER, HOLIER PLACE, AND TO RISE EACH DAY INTO A HIGHER SENSE OF LIFE AND LOVE.

The MESSAGE
of the Medicine Man

As THE counsellor of his tribe, the medicine man used music as a medium for healing his people of their physical and spiritual ills, for teaching them truth and light, and for appealing to the Great Father for strength and courage. It was the medicine man who explained to the Indian child the tribal ceremonies of his ancestors and taught him the influence and power of music in his daily life.

The child of the Red man learned the beauty and charm of rhythm through the songs of birds, the ripple of water in brooks and lakes, and the sighing of the wind in the trees. He was able to imitate the notes of birds, the growl of the bear, the cry of the panther, and the call of the deer. The songs and games of the Indian child were closely allied with nature, and he came to look upon her melodies as the source of his highest ideals and as the instrument of the Great Spirit.

Through his fellowship with music the Indian youth learned to live nobly, to love sacredly, to fight valiantly, and to die bravely; the message of the Great Father filled his soul with hope and marked the heritage he has left in his art and music.

The Signal of Peace

THROUGHOUT centuries the Red Man, the native American, dwelt in peace and quiet. He roamed the prairies in freedom, climbed the mountains in exaltation, and found happiness in the green valleys of contentment. His love for the land of his nativity was surpassed only by his love for his brethren, to whom he was bound by a strong and lasting friendship. These days of unmolested quiet and primitive majesty were not, however, to continue.

When the tread of alien feet on the far reaching prairies broke the vast living silence of an uncivilized world and the Paleface stepped from out the mists to penetrate the ancestral heritage of ancient tribes, the Indian regarded him as a god. In his simple language, the fearless chieftain, tall and stately as a mountain pine, voiced to his visitor a cordial welcome to the land of the Redskin; and with spear upraised, in childlike faith he offered to his white brethren the signal of peace.

We memoralize in the 1930 edition of the Tom Tom the quiet, simple, trusting spirit of the vanishing Red Man.

Before the white man came the Indian lived as a pure product of nature. The rhythm and purity of unmolested nature was his music, his art, his literature, his law, and his religion. The God of nature was his God. His initial code of life was mutual trust and good will. The deceit, materialism, and avarice of the white man had not marred his way of life.

Out of every human struggle some desirable by-products can be salvaged. Civilization moves on. The basic qualities of each vanquished race are ultimately blended with those of the advancing intruder. It is our unique educational opportunity here in Oklahoma to appropriate for our mental enlightenment and spiritual realization the abiding cultural values exhibited in the Indian's way of life and thus lift ourselves to a higher level of cooperative human living.

ELI C. FOSTER
Principal of Central High School

The central theme of this book represents a chapter in the westward march of civilization. One who views the statues by Cyrus E. Dallin may get a picture of the great struggle which has taken place in our own great State of Oklahoma in order that industry and society might progress in their persistent struggle for the higher things of life.

Here on these hills and plains, after much suffering, many hardships and bitter struggles, under the guiding hand of Him who knows all and sees all, the Paleface and the Red Man joined hands in a lasting friendship.

The readers of this book may come to realize more fully the great contributions which have been made by the pioneers of our country. They may have a deeper appreciation for the splendid monument to this civilization which the good people of Tulsa have built for the students of Central High School.

"The Appeal to the Great Spirit" has contributed much to the high idealism of our school. It will continue to inspire and uplift those who come and receive the great gifts of this marvelous institution.

Liberal Arts

REALIZING that culture comes from an understanding of the knowledge amassed through the ages, the white man and the red turned in their early pursuit of wisdom to a study of the liberal arts. The posterity of the two races, working and living together in harmony and friendship, have made a place for English, history, foreign languages, mathematics, and science in the academic curriculum of Tulsa Central High School.

Expressing life simply and forcefully, clearly and beautifully, is the goal toward which the study of composition and literature is directed, as a foundation for student authorship, literary or journalistic. Not only does the student share the joys and sorrows of characters made universal by the pens of masters from the Orient, from ancient Greece and Rome, from modern Europe, England, and America, but he also has the opportunity to do creative writing through the preparation of sonnets, ballads, essays, short stories, one act plays, summaries, and literary criticisms. His journalistic tendencies are encouraged through the medium of the TULSA SCHOOL LIFE, the weekly newspaper, and the TOM TOM, the yearbook, representatives of the school's finest achievements in composition, in art, and in printing.

History and social science unfold to the student the necessary background for good citizenship and for international amity. By studying the religious, the economic, the social, and the political life of our nation and of other nations, and by understanding the problems of the American democracy in its struggle for life and recognition, the student learns to appreciate the contemporary world in its relation to the various civilizations of mankind throughout the centuries.

LANGUAGE is a mirror through which the student may really catch a glimpse of the mental processes of nations. Since much emphasis is placed on international relations, a knowledge of languages helps to foster a spirit of universal understanding. The foreign language department not only develops in the student the ability to read and to understand languages, but enables him to appreciate the literature of other lands and to realize the composite origin of his native tongue.

The mathematics curriculum, consisting of algebra, geometry, and trigonometry, offers extensive training for college work and for the practical problems of daily life. Its aim is that of developing accuracy in the use of numbers, of gaining an understanding of the laws and principles governing the use of numbers, and of demonstrating the importance of mathematics in scientific and in industrial work.

Science challenges the student to investigate its wealth of truth and interest. Its major divisions, biological, physical, and earth, offer unlimited fields for study. In the first group are biology, botany, zoology, and physiology; in the second, physics and chemistry; in the third, agriculture, geography, and geology. In addition to field trips, class discussions, scientific collections, and actual work with plant and animal life, the student has an opportunity to do research work in the well-equipped laboratories provided by the science department.

In the merging of the interests of the red man and the white, a sympathetic understanding of languages, of world progress, of peoples of other lands, of exactness in computation and scientific research, has been indispensable in the development of constructive thinking, the greatest achievement of life; for to think is to know, and to know is to live.

The Exponents of Liberal Thought

Fine Arts

FROM the days of antiquity to those of the present, man's loftiest emotions have found expression through art, music, and drama, which have given him unlimited opportunities to materialize his fancies.

Art is built upon the three structural elements of architecture, sculpture and painting; line harmony, dark and light, and color. Since man has found that pleasure comes with harmony, the value of design is increasing in importance because no item of personal, home, or community adornment can exist without the elements of space arts. The student's personality is reflected through his creations from clay, charcoal, oils, water colors, and pastellos; his appreciation of nature and of architectural masterpieces is fostered by the study of the structural and landscape features of the locality. The youthful artist may transform the stage into a fairyland, brilliant flashes of color into attractive posters, and the Tom Tom into a pictorial record of Indian life.

Music, the language of the angels, embodies the finest aspirations and the highest emotional achievements of the beauty of every nation, every home, and every heart. It becomes a part of the very lives of the students through the stirring, patriotic marches of the bands, the melodious symphonies of the orchestras, and the clear, sweet strains of human voices.

Fine Arts

The student's religious longings are expressed through singing and sharing with others the sacred message of the great oratorios, the CREATION, HIAWATHA'S WEDDING MARCH, and the MESSIAH. His jocund moods are portrayed through some of the light operas, as PINAFORE, THE RED MILL, MIKADO, SWEETHEARTS, CHIMES OF NORMANDY, and THE MASCOT. As a gift of gratitude to music, the student body of Tulsa Central High School has realized the dream of a great memorial organ, whose resonant melody radio carries on the wings of the breeze into the hearts and homes of students in many climes.

Drama, real or make-believe, develops poise, makes friends of companions, turns existence into living, and gives color to personality, force to character, and charm to voice. Many a student finds recreation in character interpretation, make-up, stagecraft, and in the participation of such plays as THE ENEMY, MACBETH, SMILIN' THROUGH, ROMEO AND JULIET, PEG O' MY HEART, THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING, DISRAELI, IN THE NEXT ROOM, DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE.

Though drama and with the day, music die with the breeze, and time destroy art, their inspiration lingers, on, for

The Disciples of Infinite Truth and Beauty

Practical Arts—

THE present status of man's industrial and cultural development is largely the result of the efforts of skilled craftsmen who have labored throughout the ages to perfect their work. Tulsa Central High School has long recognized the importance of and has made a place in its curriculum for such practical arts as commerce, home economics, and manual arts.

Recognizing that a theoretical training in and a practical application of the principles of business administration are the elements upon which a successful business career is founded, the department of commerce offers not only instruction and practice in typewriting, bookkeeping, filing, indexing, shorthand, office appliances, banking, and retail salesmanship, but it also offers classes in business organization and management, wherein the student is trained in marketing, production, personnel, purchasing, manufacturing, traffic, commercial law, and in the problems of finance. By arrangements with Tulsa merchants, the student works in the stores and gains practical experience in advertising, in window display, and in retail merchandising.

Homecraft, the oldest art in history, has provided for man his three necessities: shelter, food and clothing. Home making, as a result, has undergone many stages of development.

Practical Arts—

THROUGH studying the responsibilities of mothercraft, parenthood, and home maintenance, the student—boy or girl—partially realizes the problems of planning and managing the home. Foods—their composition, purchase, preparation, serving, and their relation to health; clothing—its design, selection and making; children—their care and training; the establishment of a simple, though ideally perfect, home to suit the practical, the aesthetic, and the spiritual needs of the family—all these are factors entering into the student's training for worthy membership in the home, that institution which fashions and shapes man's ideals, and furnishes the background for his independence of character, his sense of service to others, and his efficiency in the world.

In the manual arts, the student is taught how to contribute his share to the upkeep of the home and to meet his own needs. He is led to appreciate fine crafsmanship, to establish right attitudes, and to realize a sense of responsibility; in addition, he is given a preliminary training that makes technical work comprehensible, and gives him an insight into modern industrial conditions.

"Work!
Thank God for the might of it,
The ardor, the urge, the delight of it—
Work that springs from the heart's desire,
Setting the brain and the soul on fire—
Oh, what is so good as the heat of it,
And what is so glad as the beat of it,
And what is so kind as the stern command,
Challenging brain and heart and hand?"

Physical Arts

A STRONG, healthy body has been one of the great objectives of man from prehistoric times. Rare physical beauty was considered the highest attainment by the early Greeks and Romans, and extraordinary physical strength was the pride of the primitive Red Man. Realizing that powerful physique aids in building powerful nations, that soundness of body makes for soundness of intellect, and that clearness of thinking develops supreme moral sense, modern humanity is providing facilities for the student's physical and social development as well as for his mental, aesthetic, and spiritual growth. The physical education department of Tulsa Central High School has a double trust of training both boys and girls in the art of living generally, fully, and whole heartedly.

The aim of the boys' education department is that of training the young man in health and in physical efficiency, of developing the nerves, muscular skills, and of providing for leisure play and character development. During the school year, 2920 intramural contests, involving 6084 boys and 42,824 participations, have been scheduled in wrestling, boxing, life-saving, water basket ball, water polo, baseball, basket ball, football, tennis, track, and swimming. In this diversified program every boy in the department has taken a part in some phase of the work; hence the development of the entire group instead of the specialization of a few athletes who are on the interscholastic teams.

Physical Arts

THE girls' physical education department enrolls between thirteen and fourteen hundred girls, all of whom take some form of physical education in two well-equipped gyms, in an individual gym, in the swimming pool, or in the rest room. Physical examinations are given each girl at the beginning and the end of the semester. Should the student deviate somewhat from normal, she is placed in the individual gym class where she participates in corrective exercises and games to fit her individual needs as represented by her physical examination card, her silhouetteograph posture picture, and a doctor's certificate. Any post operative case or girl who has returned from an illness is allowed to rest during the physical education period.

If the student is a junior, she takes swimming unless she advances by merit from the swimming class into a life saving group; if a sophomore, she has one hour a week for folk dancing and clogging, one for organized games, sports, natural gymnastics, and one for hygiene. The student may find joy and self-expression in interpretative dancing or in intramural sports; hockey and archery in the fall; volley ball, basket ball, and swimming in the winter; baseball, track, and tennis in the spring.

Every student — boy or girl — may, therefore, come to realize that the law of health must be the law of life, and to see that the perfect image of the Great Spirit may be reflected in man.

The Medicine Man

"BEWARE! The white man speaks with forked tongue," was the warning sounded by the Medicine Man to his people soon after the arrival of the Paleface. In the few short moons which had elapsed since his first appearance on the prairies, he had robbed the Indian of his land, had driven the buffalo from the plains, and had introduced to the Indian the deadly menace of trickery and deceit. These were the underlying causes which hastened the beginning of a contest which lasted for years, a contest between the white man and the red, the one fighting for expansion, the other for his very existence.

The Medicine Man, forseeing the tragedy of the Red Man's fate, counseled his tribe to halt the despoilation of their race; but his appeal was in vain. Onward came the ruthless westward movement of the Paleface despite all efforts of the red-skinned sage.

FOLLOWING ponderous hours of learning wherein tribal sages have wisely counseled their audience of eager youth, there comes a space for reminiscing between the shadows of evening and the dawn of a new day.

The seniors have been a powerful tribe, performing great deeds and laying everlasting traditions. Their chieftains, Sneed, McBride, and Dobson, have successfully led their fellow classmates forward and upward, under the guidance of their director, Miss Lulu B. Beckington.

In drama they have produced A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, MRS. BUMPSTEAD LEIGH, APPLESAUCE, THE POOR NUT, and THE DUMMY; in council they have called their brethren together for the most enjoyed pow wow ever held; and in athletics they have proved themselves worthy braves by their high degree of skill and strength.

THE Senior Home Room Manual, produced through the combined efforts of students and teachers, contains a program of study of the world's great ideals and the contributions made by men and women to these ideals. Through the brief studies of government, philosophy, social science, religion, art, and literature, the seniors have become familiar, to some degree, with great characters; and, through student donations to the art fund, they have demonstrated their appreciation of art in the purchase of famous pictures for the home rooms.

As a class, the seniors have contributed well over five thousand dollars toward payment of the memorial organ, and — but see, the Great Spirit challenges them to tomorrow's dawn that is breaking over the horizon of graduation.

The Junior Class

THE juniors have earned their eagle's feather to place in their colorful headdress. The time has come to put away the childish things of early youth, but to lose none of that youthful eagerness in confronting the imimnent realities. One eagle's feather — shall it be the starting of a mighty chieftain's adornment ,or shall it be a confronting memory of brighter days?

They have been led by Howard and Chenoweth, men mighty and brave. They have presented the plays, ROBIN HOOD, IF I WERE KING, and NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH. They have played at games and won, and have feated the esteemed seniors at pow wow.

Besides the knowledge acquired in their various classes, the juniors have learned during the home room programs, of the world's great inventions and of the discoveries which have lifted the burdens of man and contributed to his success and happiness.

The Junior Class

THROUGH the acquisition of an international sympathy with man in his achievements throughout the ages, the juniors have been given guides for effective school work and the attainment of exemplary character and desirable citizenship in school life as well as in eventual adult life.

Led by their counselor, Mrs. Minnie Mae Summers, they have earned the feather, and with the help of the Great Spirit they shall soon be deserving of another as they answer life's challenge —

"Where are you going, Great Heart?"
"To life today above the past;
To make tomorrow sure and fast;
To nail God's colors to the mast."
"Then God go with you, Great Heart!"

In Memoriam

The Great Spirit called. And with that undying faith, which was her blessing, Frances D. Cary answered Him. She did not leave us, however, until her unselfish service had built a temple unto whose altar we may bring our loftiest aspirations as offerings unto her memory.

She was, indeed, as she prayed she might be. Ever conscious of her unity with God, she listened for His voice and heard no other call. Separating all error from her thought of man, she saw him only as her Father's image. She showed Him reverence and shared with him her holiest treasures. She made her mental home a sacred place, golden with gratitude, redolent with love, white with purity. She sent no thought into the world that did not bless, or cheer, or purify, or heal. She had no aim but to make earth a fairer, holier place, and to rise each day into a higher sense of life and love.

"Great is thy work, Oh, Builder
Thy name shall endure for aye."

The Sophomore Class

THE sophomores, the best of both Indian and white blood, come from their various haunts at the signal of peace and in appeal to the Great Spirit. They come as one body, bringing with them a spirit of eagerness to barter their best for the best Central High School can give. They are a colossal class, but not in numbers alone does their glory lie. They have great skill and might in the field of athletics, and they number among their tribesmen potential artists, musicians, writers, dramatics, and followers of the other arts. In keeping with their youth, they presented an artistic, fantasitc play, PRUNELLA, entrancing in its fairy-story, song, and dance.

The Sophomore Class

THE orientation of the sophomores into the spirit of idealism which challenges the followers of the Great Spirit is accomplished, in part, through a systematic course of study in the home room. This study has as its aim a thorough acquaintance with the rules of personal conduct and the student activities program. Under the guidance of Miss Gertrude Rector and the late Frances D. Cary, the sophomores have learned to appreciate the spiritual charm of the students' prayer, the practical beauty of the students' creed, and the social responsibility of sitting as members in the great council. Through the sophomore experiences, the eagerness, joy, and wistfulness of earlier youth are moulded into allegiance and service to the Great Spirit.

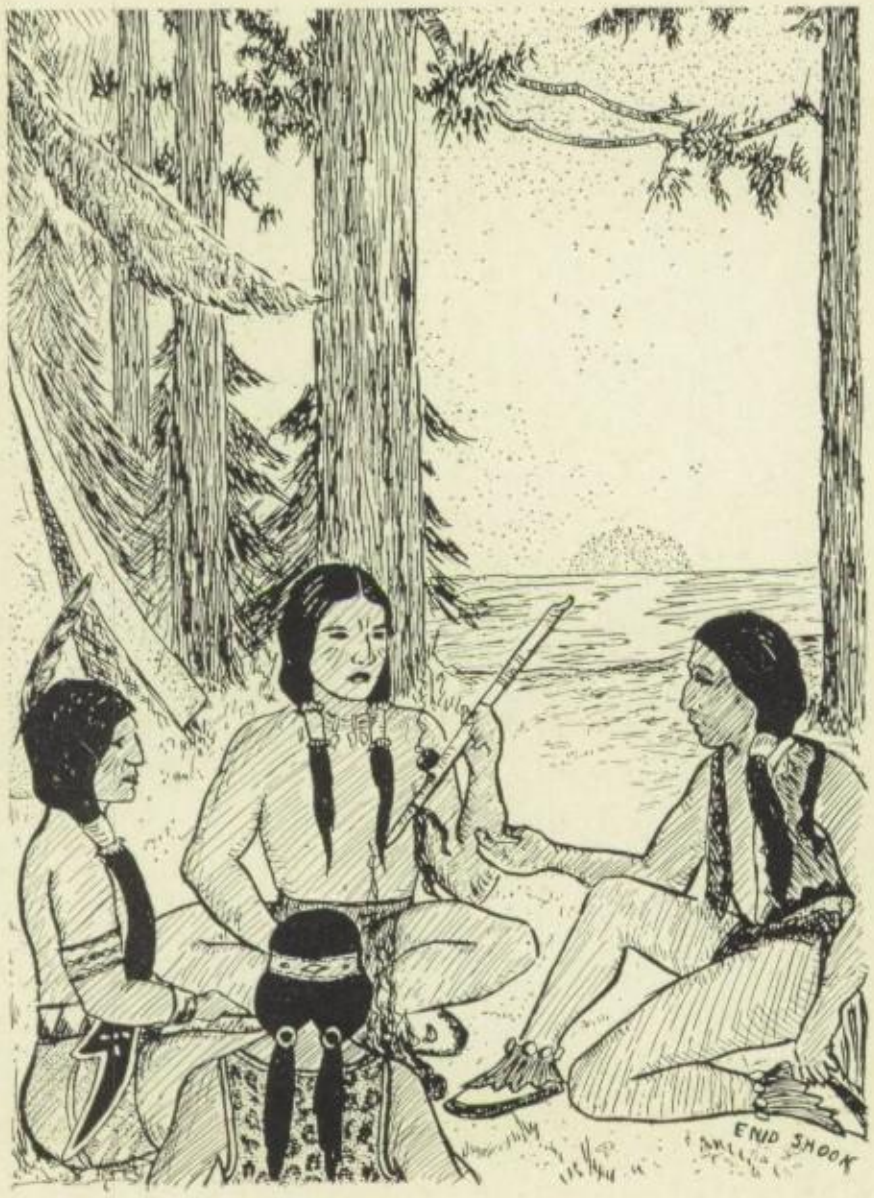
The Protest

HARDLY had the echoes of the Medicine Man's warning died away than the Indian began to realize that his dominion was imperiled. He, therefore, sent one of his tribesmen to the white man declaring that there would be a mighty resistance if the invasion continued. This protest was unheeded by the white man who was more than a match for the Indian although the latter fought with all the fury of an outraged race.

Aware of his inferior strength, the red man sought to appease his foe by treaties which were for the most part broken by the imprudent white man. His honor and his promise became as nothing to the virtuous Indian who yielded concession after concession, only to find more demanded. In the fierce struggle which followed he opened, one by one, all his resources, concentrated all his energy on the preservation of his kingdom and his life, only to find himself facing extermination at the hands of an insatiable foe.

ORGANIZATIONS



HÉLÈNE COHN

The Appeal to the Great Spirit

CRUELTY inflicted by the white man caused the Indian unparalleled suffering. It disrupted his tribal council, brought disease and death to his people, and started him on his long journey over the trail of tears to a destiny from which no worldly power could deliver him. Only the Great Spirit could intervene and save his noble race from extinction.

Thin and hollow-cheeked as a result of the long hopeless struggle for the salvation of his people, he climbed the mountain summit to seek atonement with his Maker. With palms upraised in reverent supplication, he poured forth the irrepressible sadness which filled his soul, asked for Supreme guidance, and sought deliverance for his race, which the white man seemed determined to drive into oblivion. It was the last chapter of all; and, in mute appeal, he implored compassion from the Great Father, knowing that only He could give the Indian life, peace, and happiness.

The Inspiration of the Great Spirit

Euchee Indians, The Path to the Great Spirit, Chief John Abbott, Statehood Day, Armistice Assembly

The Assembly Program

PART I

MARCH ..... Memorial Organ

The students enter by home rooms.

Color Ritual ..... Boy Scouts

The assembly rises as the organ plays "To the Colors". The flag is brought down the center aisle from the rear of the auditorium and placed on the stage.

The Pledge of Allegiance (Led by a Boy Scout) ..... Assembly

The Star Spangled Banner ..... Assembly

The Student's Creed (Led by a Student) ..... Assembly

"I believe in honest work, in generous comradeship, in the courage of high convictions. I believe in the inspiration that comes from contact with all that is truest and best, in books, in people, in life. I believe in loyalty to our high school, the fostering mother of these ideals, and I pledge her my allegiance in all her undertakings; in all that will make her a stronger and nobler school."

The School Song ..... Assembly

TULSA HIGH

Where the Arkansas is winding, and the Osage Hills look down
Proudly stands our Tulsa High School, bearing nation-wide renown,
Its true bonds can ne'er be broken, nor its loyal spirit die,
Ever staunch we'll stand together, ever bound by mem'ry's tie.
Let us now our voices raise
In a joyful song of praise.
For we love the Tulsa Spirit — never drifting with the stream.
Then in faith and charity
May our motto ever be,

"Here's a heart for Tulsa High School
For the Crimson and the Cream."

We are proud of our Great Spirit, that upholds ideals so bright,
And our school shall e'er be noted for its virtue and its might.
To our teachers and our classmates, may we ever loyal be,
May the spark of present friendship live and burn eternally.

—Jane Kirk, 1923.

Announcements ..... The Principal

The principal makes the announcements and presents the student chairman who presides through the remainder of the assembly program.

The Assembly Program

School Hymn ..... Assembly

O, Great Spirit, at thy call,
We have pledged our youth;
Ever climbing, one and all
Seek eternal truth.
With thy standard at our side,
Bound by purpose high;
Thou, Great Spirit, be our guide,
Where thy way may lie.
With thy vision light our eyes,
Show thy heights above,
Grant us wisdom, thou art wise,
Teach us thy great love.
Consecrate our aim sincere,
Cleanse each inmost soul;
O Great Spirit, be thou near,
Distant shines the goal.
For the beauty through each day
Joy and friendship true,
Gifts of thine along the way,
Hear our thanks anew.
When we gain the farthest height,
By thy wisdom taught,
We shall find thee, Truth and Light,
Thou art all we sought.

—Doris Allen, 1929.

Scripture and Prayer ..... Student

Amen Chant ..... Memorial Organ

STUDENTS' PRAYER

To be ever conscious of my unity with God, to listen for His voice, and hear no other call;
To separate all error from my thought of man, and see him only as my Father's image, to show Him reverence and share with Him my holiest treasures;
To keep my mental home a sacred place, golden with gratitude, redolent with love, white with purity, cleansed from the flesh;
To send no thought into the world that will not bless, or cheer, or purify, or heal;
To have no aim but to make earth a fairer, holier place, and to rise each day into a higher sense of life and love.

PART II

Part II of the assembly varies from week to week but is in keeping with Part I as an influence for developing higher ideals and in promoting school loyalty.

THROUHOUT the 1930 Tom Tom we have endeavored to express the unity of the Indian's ideals and the white man's aspirations, the likeness of the Great Spirit and the Divine Conception, and the uniform casting of the red man and his white brother from the same die and of the same elements.

Just as the amalgamation of two powerful peoples has produced a finer race than either of them might have been alone, so has the cooperation of the individual persons in Central High School brought forth a well-balanced whole.

If our craftsmanship is good, and is wisely wrought, we must gratefully acknowledge the aid lent us by others: the Board of Education which has made the Tom Tom's publication possible; Tulsa patrons who have generously contributed with financial aid; Mr. W. W. Graham and his helpers in the high school print shop to whom we owe the printing and the mechanical beauty of the Tom Tom; Miss Jean Roberts and the Tulsa School Life Staff for favorable publicity and timely assistance; Mr. R. C. Walker and Mr. E. K. Burns of the Southwestern Engraving Company for our beautiful engravings; Mr. Ed Miller and the Monroe Studio for the artistry of our pictorial sections; Mr. J. T. Horner and the school banking force for their exact handling of our finances; Mrs. Mae Allyn Christie and her art staff for the exquisite beauty and harmony of the Tom Tom art; Mr. Merle Prunty, Mr. Eli C. Foster, Mr. Ward H. Green and the Tom Tom Board for their stabilizing council; and every member of the faculty and student body without whose cooperation our efforts would have been futile.

STUDENT'S CREED

I BELIEVE IN HONEST WORK, IN GENEROUS COMRADESHIP, IN THE COURAGE OF HIGH CONVICTIONS.

I BELIEVE IN THE INSPIRATION THAT COMES FROM CONTACT WITH ALL THAT IS TRUEST AND BEST IN BOOKS, IN PEOPLE, IN LIFE.

I BELIEVE IN LOYALTY TO OUR HIGH SCHOOL, THE FOSTERING MOTHER OF THESE IDEALS, AND I PLEDGE HER MY ALLEGIANCE, IN ALL HER UNDERTAKINGS; IN ALL THAT WILL MAKE HER A STRONGER, AND NOBLER SCHOOL.
